Hasselmo speaks out

Tracy Claseman
Staff Writer

Just a few hours after the legislature approved $71.5 million in funding for the university, University of Minnesota President Nils Hasselmo expressed enthusiasm over the relationship between the University and the legislature.

"I'm very optimistic about it," Hasselmo said Tuesday. "The legislature has been perhaps more understanding about the University than the public perception has been. They are faced with putting scarce resources into areas where they can do the most good."

Hasselmo was at UMD Tuesday fielding questions from concerned students and faculty on everything from tuition to diversity to UMD's position within the University system.

Hasselmo insisted that administrators don't want to shape the future of UMD, but rather, give feedback and guidance.

"I see UMD as the second major institution in this state," he said, adding that the Twin Cities campus and UMD are the primary research campuses in the state.

UMD also plays an important role in student instruction, Hasselmo said.

"The teaching function is that of a residential undergraduate campus. You've been very successful with that," he said.

Hasselmo expressed hope that UMD could become the primary area of graduate study in some disciplines, with the Twin Cities acting as the supplementary resource.

Concerns about the decision to charge equal tuition for all colleges and campuses were also raised.

Hasselmo said that the consistent tuition rate will encourage students to enroll in the college which is most beneficial to their education.

"We saw in some instances that students choice of majors, and certainly college of enrollment, was determined by the tuition rate," he said.

He assured the audience that UMD tuition rates would not be driven by Twin Cities tuition rates.

Hasselmo said that diversity in both enrollment and hiring is an important issue at the University.

UMD graduate students consider unionization

Wade Stromgren
Staff Writer

Graduate assistants throughout the University of Minnesota system will be taking part in a union election for graduate assistants on May 2 and 3, 1990. On May 2, teaching assistants (TA) and research assistants (RA) from UMD will be able to vote either for or against representation by the Graduate Student Employees Association (GSEA) union.

Since last quarter, Jack Tyllia, a composition TA, has been actively promoting the union. Tyllia said that "GSEA is long overdue" and that "in some areas, graduate student employees are treated as pack animals."

"Wages are not the big issue," according to Rachel Buff, a GSEA staff member. "It's when you work 50 hours and get paid for 20 that it becomes a problem."

According to the Department of Institutional Research at UMD, the "floor" salary for graduate assistants is $15,750 at 100 percent appointment for nine months.

This is equal to $10.06 per hour.

Eileen Walsh, also a GSEA staff member, said that the University graduate assistants are paid approximately $1,000 less (minimum pay) than graduate assistants at the University of Wisconsin at Madison, and $500 to $600 less than University of Michigan graduate assistants.

Buff and Tyllia use the current situation in the UMD composition department to justify unionization of the graduate students; without any input from their graduate assistants, the composition department combined freshman composition and word processing into one class. Composition TAs were informed that they were to teach the combined classes—a 25 percent increase in workload with no increase in pay. (See related story below.)

According to Walsh, GSEA has already acted on the behalf of UMD's composition TAs by filing a complaint with the Bureau of Mediation Services (BMS), a department of the State of Minnesota. Under the Maintenance of Status Quo Order, an employer cannot materially change the working conditions while a union election is pending. Jean King, of BMS, said that, although the bureau received a copy of the letter from GSEA to the University which requested the University to withdraw the change in workload, neither GSEA nor the University has taken further action.

Equity of workload is another problem among graduate assistants. For example, UMD's Composition Department has created a heated controversy involving the work load of its teaching assistants.

At a meeting March 30, the Composition Department proposed an increase in the workload of teaching assistants. Instead of teaching composition four days a week, they would teach composition and word processing five days a week.

This new proposed work load came with no pay increase to compensate for the extra hours which they would have to put in. The proposal is at a stand still at the present moment until May 2, when the teaching assistants vote on whether or not to unionize. The Twin Cities campus will also be voting on unionizing.

Teaching assistant Jack Tyllia explained that the Twin Cities campus had been working on starting a union for a year, before the Duluth Campus became involved. They began sending UMD information on the project, so they too would become involved in making the union university-wide.

Tyllia believes students will opt for a union. It would give them power to negotiate in situations similar to the current problem in the composition department.

Tyllia feels the Composition department didn't inform the teaching assistants of their plans earlier because they "didn't think we were entitled to know."

Some of the grad students have written the budget committee to ask for more money to try and remedy this problem.

Tyllia says people are upset over this. "When people do things without your knowledge, or without your participation, it makes you angry...if maybe (the department) had involved (the teaching assistants) all along the way, they might be more willing to work with them."

Tyllia said that the last time there was a load increase of three days to four days a week in the composition class, there was a pay increase. He said that today's teaching assistants are only looking for the same thing.

Bill Gibson, head of the Composition Department, was advised by the department's lawyers not to discuss the present situation until the union vote has taken place.

Latin America sambas to UMD

An Hispanic Fiesta from 5:30 p.m. until midnight on Sat., April 28 will begin Latin American Awareness Week in the UMD Kirby Ballroom. The Fiesta will begin a week of events to bring awareness of the issues and cultures in "The Other America" to UMD students.

"We called it the Other America because of the misunderstandings between the United States and Latin America," said Suzanna Pelayo, one of the organizers of the events. "That's a continuous problem with dealing with the relations between the two cultures."

"Being an American means more than just being from the United States--the term encompasses the entire Western Hemisphere," said Dave Woodward, also an organizer. "The problem is that, south of Texas, the people and cultures are basically overlooked."

On April 30, Louis Smith, producer of Alicia, a film about mothers of the disappeared in El Salvador, will give a commentary. Smith is a lawyer who testifies before the U.S. Congress in support of human rights in Central America. He is also the author of Disappearances in Guatemala. The presentation will take place in Montague Hall 80 at 7:30 p.m.

On Tuesday, the movie Romero will be shown at noon in the Bull Pub. Also on Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Bull Pub, Daniel Joya will speak on "El Salvador from the eyes of a student." Before coming to the United States, Joya was a third-year law student at the Centro Universitario de Oriente. Now he lives in Minneapolis and seeks to establish connections and create sister colleges between the United States and El Salvador.

On Wednesday, Jim Belote, Professor of Sociology and Anthropology at UMD will present "U.S. relations with Latin America." Belote has traveled through and lived in South America.

On Thursday, Jean Carrol will present "Women of Latin America" and answer questions with a panel of Latin American UMD students in the Bull Pub at noon. Carrol has lived in Central America. Also on Thursday, Tom Hagen will speak about his experiences in a presentation entitled, "Observations of the Election in Nicaragua." The presentation will take place in Kirby 355 at 2 p.m.

On Friday at noon in the Bull Pub there will be a dialogue with refugees from El Salvador. They will answer questions about their experiences. They traveled on the underground railroad to reach Duluth and are now waiting to receive visas to live and work in Canada.

Career Corner

Jud
Moon

Choosing the right major and eventually the right career is difficult. Though your schooling is important, it is by no means the only thing to consider when making the decision.

The question of what to major in produces a great deal of stress in many college students because many just don't know what to do. Many people focus on only one aspect of the major, like what kind of job they can get. But almost every major has countless possibilities, and an individual's view may be only one aspect of it.

Your major may be important in your first job, but it becomes less vital as you establish yourself in the working world. Once you have your foot in the door, what you do from the inside is up to you. Remember, your education doesn't have to end simply because you've earned your degree.

Your college degree gives you more skills than you realize. Liberal arts classes help make you more well-rounded and knowledgeable in more than just your field. College offers many chances to learn that are not even in the classroom. Outside activities such as clubs, traveling abroad, and other non-classroom experience, can be just as important as your "A" in chemistry.

If you're having trouble finding a career that allows you to incorporate your outside interests, help is available. UMD's Career and Placement Services has a number of programs that can help you with this difficult decision.

A 3-credit independent study course, "Career Awareness and Development" (PSY 3535) is available through the Psychology Department and CEE. The course consists of 30 half-hour videos about topics dealing with careers, life planning, and reaching your goals. This format is helpful because it allows you to work at your own pace and tailor the class to your personal needs.

The Discover program is a computer program that gives information about the world of work and you. It offers nine different modules to choose from to help you explore career opportunities and possibilities.

The Strong Interest Inventory is a test designed to measure how your interests match with careers. This test compares your interests with people in the working world who enjoy their occupations.

Your career decisions are difficult ones to make, but you don't have to do it alone. Help is available--your academic advisors, family, and career counselors. The better you are at assessing what you are good at, what interests you, and what is available, the more likely the choice you make will be the right one.

SA elections end; rumors begin

Michelle Stoltman
Staff Writer

The winners of the final SA elections were released late yesterday afternoon, bringing the 1990 campaign effort to a close.

The new 1990-91 president is Karen Hietala, with 503 votes. The runner-up, Matthew Spearman, came in with 208 votes. There were also 18 write-ins for the presidential position, including one for Ken Keller, one for Lawrence Ianni and two for the popular cartoon hero, Bart Simpson.

The following people were elected for positions in their colleges: (However, due to the lack of applicants, the number of candidates equalled the number of positions.)

There was a total of 729 votes, roughly representing nine percent of the entire student body.

Despite the seemingly flawless effort and outcome, the election drew some controversy.

A group of six to seven people, members of MPIRG and others, felt there were inconsistencies with the election. They didn't call for another election but asked for an emergency meeting with the UMDSA Rules and Elections Committee to discuss and suggest ways in which to hold elections in a better fashion.

This meeting evoked rumors that a second election would have to be held, despite the fact that the results had not been released yet.

"The reason the results were withheld is because I heard there was going to be a protest of the election in general and didn't know who it was protesting, only that they wanted to meet with us today (Wednesday) at 3 p.m.," said Anne Roos, UMDSA Congress Chairwoman.

But another election will not be held and the results are final.

This group of people is scheduled to meet with the Rules and Elections Committee at a later date to help strengthen the procedures and put emphasis on the election rules.

The UMD Congress will then look at these proposals and vote on them in the final congressional meeting of the year.

MPIRG

Minnesota Public Interest Research Group

An Open Letter from UMD-MPIRG

Dear Students,

Last week UMD-MPIRG went before the UMD Student Association to ask for their support. We wanted them to endorse our petition to upgrade the MPIRG fee from a yes/no donation system to a reusable/refundable system. We don't think they quite understood what we wanted. We were not asking for permission (after all, less than 10% of the student body voted these people in), we wanted them to endorse our petition to make the change. We figure that if we can get 50% of UMD full-time students to support the fee change, then it's justified.

One SA member in particular accused MPIRG of preying on the "ignorance of students."

We thought it somewhat amusing that the SA seemed so firm on their low opinion of UMD students' abilities to understand and make their own choice. They seemed unaffected by our total willingness to accept the challenge of educating students on UMD-MPIRG.

Another SA member actually stated that students would sign our petition without even questioning it! How dumb does he think we the students are?

Here is the scoop on the fee:

We would like to go from a donation system to a reusable/refundable system at the same rate of $2.25 per quarter.

We are going to try and get over 50% of full-time students' signatures to do this.

If we can do this, we believe that it is justified—majority support!

So, it is up to us to make our case. Here is how the reusable/refundable system would work:

A. Every registration form would contain an area identifying MPIRG, the dollar amount, and a brief statement addressing MPIRG's purpose and tax status.

B. You will be requested to check a box if you do not wish to pay the fee.

C. If you check this box, you will not be charged.

D. If at any time during the year you want a refund, all you will have to do is present your fee statement to the MPIRG office and your fee will be refunded via mail within two weeks.

E. Under this system, MPIRG bears the responsibility of educating students on what MPIRG does and how it works. We will be part of all freshman orientations. Statements describing MPIRG are already in UMD catalogs. All students will receive information, and if it is not sufficient, then they may choose not to pay the fee.

We resent the SA's implications that we will prey on students' "ignorance." We think students are bright enough to make their own choices.

Did you know that the SA will get almost $25,000 next year, and that we the students have no choice in the matter?

Less than 300 people voted in the SA primary, and we are willing to shoot for 3,000 signatures!

They are right, it isn't fair. It isn't fair for SA to get in the way of MPIRG getting things done, because UMD-MPIRG is positive and action oriented.

Our main goals are Northern Minnesota's environmental issues and diversity. These are the issues students chose to work on, and we are open to any student's participation. But we need the funding to make things happen. If we can get 50% of UMD students to contribute to MPIRG, we would still get less than the SA. So please support the MPIRG petition.

MPIRG choice is not democratic

UMD's Minnesota Public Interest Research Group (MPIRG) chapter has recently started a petition to change their funding policy. Under the current policy, students are given the choice in giving MPIRG their support on their registration forms. If students don't mark a box, they are asked at the registration line what their preference is. What UMD-MPIRG is currently trying to do is change the system to negative checkoff system which will charge students to pay the $2.25 fee if they don't mark anything at all.

The current system works in offering students a choice. The proposed system will lead to ill-informed students paying for a service which they know nothing about. If students forget to mark the "No" box, they will be forced to go to MPIRG to get a refund. A recent letter to the editor from UMD-MPIRG explains this refund would be "hassle free." Judging from past actions, I hope that this would happen instead of students being confronted for their beliefs.

This issue is really about democratic principles and choice. Students have always been given the opportunity to support MPIRG through the check-off system. This past year, only 13 percent of the student body felt the need to support them. This support was given by democratic means. What the new means of funding will do is mask their support by inflating their figure of support. It will give support to an organization which has political beliefs toward one end of the spectrum.

Students must be made aware of this before they sign any petition. If you support MPIRG, sign the petition, but remember that you are also a voice of the entire student body. Consider the underclassmen who come to UMD who might be charged for a service they know nothing about. It doesn't sound too democratic, does it? If you don't know anything about MPIRG, consider what your actions might mean.

The STATESMAN has no ill-feelings toward MPIRG. It does serve an audience at UMD. At times, though, it is hard to understand why some of their members blame other student organizations for issues facing UMD. Hopefully, we can all work together to face all the difficult issues facing UMD.

Letters

Harth harsh

Dear Editor and Student Association,

The events which celebrated Earth Day around the world and in the local community received a lot of media attention, including many references to Earth Day or environmental issues in the STATESMAN. I was deeply disappointed that Earth Day events on campus were not given proper advance publicity in the STATESMAN. The only reference to the events sponsored by the Anishinabe club, MPIRG, and SA incorrectly stated that the events took place two weeks prior to April 20. Several people on more than one occasion asked the STATESMAN staff to provide advance publicity. What happened? Could the lack of publicity have resulted from a negative attitude toward event organizers who are also associated with the alternative campus paper (the STATESPERSON)?

The tree planting event co-sponsored by the Anishinabe club, MPIRG, UMD Plant Services, and SA was marred by the choice of SA people to go out to start ahead of the scheduled time. When a few of the people who participated (at which SA people were conspicuously absent) arrived at the site an SA person (in my opinion a larval politico-businessman) tried to rush the event. When an attempt was made to slow down the event another SA person (evidently the designated rude person) yelled "Let's just plant the tree!" The event was concluded before most people who wished to participate in the event could arrive at the site. Why did SA rush the event? Does the clique that controls SA really think they can represent the whole student body? The number of students who vote in the election of SA Congress members is dismally low.

We have just one world, one campus, and one student body. When organizations which supposedly represent all students and are funded from student service fees collected from all students behave in a partisan manner, it becomes very easy to cut back funding to a level which reflects how well these organizations meet the needs of all students. The us-versus-them mentality which the STATESMAN and SA seem to be engaging in is not beneficial to this campus.

Sincerely,
Cal Harth

MPIRG's little known facts

Dear Editor,

I'm writing in regards to MPIRG's letter in the April 19, 1990 issue of the STATESMAN. MPIRG is asking for student support in obtaining 2,729 signatures to change the way they will receive funding on campus. I want to clear up exactly what the students will be signing the petition for and how it will ultimately affect them. Currently, every quarter each UMD student has the option to check the MPIRG donation box. If they choose to do so, MPIRG gets $2.25. If they don't, MPIRG gets nothing. What MPIRG is asking to do is to switch the fee to a refundable/refundable system. If MPIRG succeeds in their petition drive and the Board of Regents approves MPIRG's request, UMD would soon have this refundable/refundable system. Let me explain this system. You are automatically charged for the MPIRG fee ($2.25) when you register for classes and only if you check the MPIRG box titled "No" on your course enrollment request will you not be charged the fee. This little known fact is something MPIRG had failed to mention in your letter. Don't get me wrong. MPIRG has an excellent program and truly does benefit the UMD students in a variety of ways. I just think students who are potential signatories of this petition which will soon be circulating UMD, should know exactly what they are endorsing.

The refundable/refundable system is currently being implemented on the Twin Cities campus where it has been called into question by a considerable amount of students.

I personally believe that if MPIRG wants to relieve an increase in benefit for the UMD students in such areas as environment, diversity, and state-wide lobbying efforts, they should work on educating and informing what MPIRG can and will do for UMD students. Currently, only about 13 percent of all UMD students check the MPIRG donation box. I think a drive to persuade the other 87 percent of UMD students who are not currently checking the donation box would be an effort better spent. An effort in trying to raise funds based on students' lack of knowledge on how the refundable/refundable system works is no way to gain additional funding. Supporting a system where you are automatically charged a fee without refusing it to me seems like an effort to deceive students into paying the $2.25 without students truly knowing what they have just done. Students may, in fact, want to donate the $2.25 for MPIRG, a very worthy cause. But, I would advocate allowing them to make that choice by checking the box marked MPIRG, not by automatically charging them for it and then later when they realized that they were assessed that fee, allowing them to, "without hassle," seek out and obtain a refund. So, to those individuals who are approached to sign the MPIRG petition: Please be aware of what it is you are actually signing and realize what the implications of your signatures might bring.

Make a dream

Dear Editor,

Being average college students, we all have our gripes and complaints. Recently, we have found out that our problems are trivial compared to a little boy named Craig. He has been suffering from leukemia for the past nine years. His main goal in life is to enter the Guinness Book of World Records for receiving the most get-well cards. Pretty innocent, huh? Through this little boy's goals we have realized that given any situation, there is optimism no matter how bleak life seems. Please make this dream come true by sending him a card at this address:

It's spring...and everybody is happy...right? Well, not everyone. An acquaintance of mine recently pointed out the not easily overlooked fact that an increase in p.d.a. (public displays of affection) has accompanied the rising mercury. These overt displays of affection can be a major source of springtime annoyance to involuntary witnesses.

According to an anonymous STATESMAN source, the solution to such annoyance lies in the old adage, "If you can't beat 'em, (or are afraid to run them over with your Samurai) join 'em." This is, of course, easier said than done. You can't "join 'em" alone. So what's a single person to do? An informal poll of single students recently revealed the pervasive attitude that "All the good ones are taken." That may or may not be true, but I do know that such defeatist attitudes are counterproductive. If you want to find a boyfriend or girlfriend you need to take the initiative.

College is probably the best chance you'll ever get to meet people. Wasn't it Waylon Jennings who said, "There's someone for everyone . . .?" With a student enrollment of nearly 8,000, Waylon's concept surely applies at UMD. Here, at our fabulous institute of higher education, there are countless opportunities to meet people, both on and off campus.

I was once set up with a guy who arrived at the door wearing a...shower cap. I was thrilled, elated and overjoyed--when he left.

The most obvious place to start looking is, of course, the classroom. A sizable number of my married or engaged friends met one another in a college class. I met my first college boyfriend in a "Telecommunications" class. Everything was just dandy . . . until his friends told me he just happened to have a fiancée back home in Appleton. I was thrilled. Really.

So you don't trust your classmates, huh? If you're in search of honesty, try your luck at a local college hangout, like the Warehouse. There, such truths as, "You have the most beautiful eyes I've ever seen," "My bedroom has really interesting wallpaper...and I'd like you to see it," and, the eternal favorite, "I think I know you from somewhere," will be revealed. Of course, such remarks deserve equally soul-baring replies. "Why thanks, I just had a cornea transplant," "Sorry, my tastes run more toward paneling," and "Yeah, I saw you sneaking out of a room in my dorm last weekend," are all properly polite--and truthful responses.

Some students, spurning the classroom and bars as meeting places, have turned to...supermarkets. "A person's shopping cart can be very revealing," said an anonymous source. "For instance, take macaroni and cheese. Kraft buyers are big spenders, generally. Those who go for the store brand probably hit their parents up for cash--not a good bet. People who buy the generic brand are likely to hit you up for money at the check out. Definitely avoid generic brand shoppers."

In Minneapolis, grocery stores have become hot-beds of scoping activity for single shoppers. At Lund's and Byerly's, young urban professionals spend hours eyeing one another in the produce section. Phone numbers are generally not exchanged until the shoppers reach the mineral water section on the other side of the store, however. I suspect this is to allow time for mutual assurance that neither party has loaded his/her cart with Twinkies and Spaghettio's.

At Rainbow Foods, where its permissible to shop in jeans and a t-shirt, scoping shoppers are far less subtle. In fact, the store employees themselves are on the prowl. Aggressive stock boys have been known to shock unwary shoppers by scrawling lurid messages on boxes of Captain Crunch.

Of course, the concept of shopping for a mate is, to some, a bit crass. Nonetheless, personal ads are becoming an increasingly popular means of seeking a...well, it depends. In Duluth, very few people run ads of this sort. However, in Minneapolis, the numerous ads in the Twin Cities Reader and in the City Pages provide Minneapolis residents with some eye-raising reading material.

Last summer I saw an ad from a man looking for a set of twins - blond haired, blue-eyed buxom twins to be specific. Gosh, I wonder if he had any responses. Many of the ads are from persons seeking partners of a specific gender and sexual orientation...which is logical. However, they often go on to enumerate specific requirements for height, weight, race, hair and eye color. This narrows the search, obviously, but the thought of refusing a date with someone simply because of their hair color seems...(and now the dreaded word)...ludicrous.

On the other hand, there are ads which reek of desperation. For example: Single, white male seeks anything breathing.

The funniest part of personals ads, however, is the way in which advertisers present themselves. i.e.: Independently wealthy Tom Cruise look-alike seeks fabulous lady to share my life. Would someone please tell me why a man who is independently wealthy and looks like Tom Cruise would put an ad in the paper? Frankly, I'm skeptical.

Is your optimism dwindling yet? Well, why not try a blind date? They're lots of fun. Really. I was once set up with a guy who arrived at the door wearing a...shower cap. I was thrilled, elated and overjoyed--when he left. Another memorable blind date involved a guy who showed up wearing torn grey cords, a black heavy metal t-shirt adorned with a nude woman being torn to shreds by a giant dragon, and a nifty green satin jacket from his favorite hometown bar. I was wearing a dress and high heels. I towered over him. I know, I know, height shouldn't matter, but most guys over twelve years of age are taller than me. I guess I wasn't mentally prepared for the event. The evening was disastrous. I ended up having to feign illness in order to end the nightmare prematurely.

Don't let my bad experiences scare you, though. Just because every blind date I've ever had was a technicolor nightmare, just because I've long since vowed never to go on a blind date again doesn't mean that you, dear reader, won't have the time of your life, fall madly in love and live happily ever after if you let your Aunt Edna introduce you to that nice neighbor of hers.

Letters from 4A

SA should speak to us

Dear Editor,

I want to express my disappointment in the Student Association (SA) and the recent SA presidential primary, held April 17 and 18. There was NOTHING done before the primary to inform UMD students as to why they should vote for these particular candidates. We (the general student population) were never told of the duties of the president or their various goals, plans, or qualifications. Because of this, the primary was essentially a popularity contest.

Until the April 19 issue of the STATESMAN came out, I knew nothing about the primary or the candidates except for the various flyers which were posted around campus. Of course, the flyers only told you to vote, not why.

In the STATESMAN article, a representative from SA complained of the low voter turnout. Granted, apathy did play a role, but I do not feel it was the only factor. I was NOT one of the 212 voters, even though I was brought out to the voting table in Kirby Hall and given a ballot. I do not take my voting privileges for granted, and the Student Association should not abuse my voting rights by assuming that I will just blindly vote in any election they arrange.

Perhaps it is time for our "voice in higher education" to start speaking to us instead of only for us.

Sincerely,
Ann Mooney

Thank you STATESMAN

Editor:

Before we scatter for the summer, let me take this opportunity to thank you and your STATESMAN staff for a fine job this year, and in particular for your clear-headed, no-nonsense coverage of the plagiarism scandal. In contrast to some student groups and most faculty, who kept a graven silence or embraced such canards as cultural diversity, and to an administration apologia which debased us all, you have framed the issue fairly and concisely. I would like to believe that your sense of ethical integrity is due in some small part to your collegiate experience, but I fear I know better than that.

Roger A. Fischer
Professor of History

Did you really think the plagiarism issue went away? Read next week's STATESMAN for more details.

KPB wants you to fling into spring

Ruth T. Glaser
Staff Writer

Kirby Program Board (KPB) will end the academic year with an entertainment frenzy as it presents its last major event this spring, "Spring Fling Week," April 30 through May 4.

Highlights of Spring Fling Week include New Band Night, Mon., April 30 at 7 p.m. Local group, Zen Identity, finalists in the Snickers New Band competition, will open the three-band concert with tunes that helped them gain almost instantaneous recognition. Their songs have been called "spooky, groovy and neon" and even warrant an "up and coming" rating from the STATESMAN's own Tim Franklin.

The next band, Ellis Hughs, has its headquarters in Burnsville, Minn., and plays its original songs to local high schools and colleges. The band has been compared to The Cure and REM, but insists its style is unique.

After the two rousing opening performances headliners The Magnolias will take the stage. As they proclaim, they are no breakers of new ground, and their late '70s style punk may be dated, but what they lack in ingenuity, they make up for with raw, crisp infectious delivery and an excitement level that can't be beat.

This show is guaranteed to be spectacular, even at the bargain basement price of $2 with ID and $4 general. You just can't beat KPB's concerts.

You'll undoubtedly need a breather after New Band Night so relax on Tuesday and prepare for all the fun you'll have on Wednesday.

On Wednesday, Spring Fling's offerings will be many. The fun starts at noon in Kirby Lounge as SiK presents its Grand Finale, the boxer shorts contest. Winners, of course, will receive those slick SiK t-shirts people have been sporting around school. This is your last chance to strut your stuff for prizes.

Then at 8 p.m. in the Kirby Ballroom, comedian extraordinary, Jeff Gerbino, will perform his fantastic stylings. The performance will be free, that's right, free!

As if you can stand any more fun, KPB will present UMD's first OUTDOOR MOVIE on Kirby Terrace at dusk (or about 9:30) on that same night. The movie is Weekend at Bernie's, an outra-geously funny comedy about a dead man, starring Jonathan Silver and Andrew McCarthy, and it is free. The movie will be shown in BohH 90 if it rains or snows. The movie will be shown again in BohH 90 on Fri., April 27, at 8 p.m.

Thursday at noon will be UMD's version of "Family Feud," more aptly named Roommate Feud. Sign your team up at Kirby tables on Monday and Tuesday to be eligible for fun and prizes (team members need not live together).

Phew! I'm exhausted just writing this article and thinking about all the fun I'll have during KPB's Spring Fling Week. Just think about how great it will be, and most of it's FREE! As my favorite pig says, "That's all folks!" I'm outta here!

Inspiration is theme for student exhibit

Artist: 1. a person who practices one or more of the fine arts, 2. one who exhibits art in their work or makes art their employment, 3. a trickster.

Art is a challenging field that requires inspiration, creativity and individuality. Each week UMD displays the work of one or two of their student artists in an effort to expose them to the critical art world.

This week through April 29 in the Tweed Museum of Art senior artists Michael Hirschey and Derek Kropp are the student exhibitors. Each artist varies greatly in his style of production and revision in relation to his work.

Inspiration. That is the word Michael Hirschey uses to describe himself as an artist and how he works. As a sixth year senior, Hirschey is a design major with an art history minor. He first came to UMD as a wrestler and dabbled in chemistry and anthropology before settling into the art department.

The main theme of Hirschey's show is how he has developed as an artist over the years. He wasn't interested in art until he came to UMD, and his work reflects how far he has come while here.

Hirschey lists his favorite mediums as glass, metal and wood. He says that he produces things quickly. Either it's there or it's not. Once started on a particular piece, he will stay on it until it is finished.

Hirschey's show includes jewelry, sculpture, charcoal drawings, computer art, and photography.

Hirschey has been working for years on some of the pieces he is showing. He has changed and improved his pieces with faculty suggestions and friends' criticism.

As for the art department, he said, "The teachers bend over backwards for you. Martin DeWitt (curator for the Tweed) is a class act dude. They've all been really helpful."

"I've learned a lot from the professors, but I am ready to move on," he added.

Individual. That is the word that accurately describes Derek Kropp. Like Hirschey, he didn't start out interested in art, but that is where the similarities end. Now a senior, Kropp was first an engineering major, but changed to his current status as a computer graphics major with a business minor.

Kropp has done something bold and daring for his show entitled "Seeing Is Believing." He has chosen to eliminate all computer art work from his show. He knows his ability in that area. Instead he is proving himself an artist within other mediums.

"Despite the fact that my major is graphics, I wanted to show that I was creative, and that I can work with any medium. A computer is so strong and can do things so quickly...not as much creativity

Impersonators flood Kirby

Kirby Lounge at noon. You could impersonate anyone you want including: famous people, professors, roommates and others.

Ruth Glaser was the host of this contest. She had been the host of the other SiK contests. As usual, she had to pry contestants out of the audience.

The contest only lasted 15 minutes. There were only three contestants. Many of the people on the SiK panel did impersonations, but they were not eligible because they already own prizes, two SiK t-shirts.

Tony Ronchak wouldn't tell the audience who he was impersonating. The audience could figure out that he was imitating Jimmy Stewart. He did a line from "It's a Wonderful Life."

Glaser kept the ball rolling with her imitation of a communications teacher. I won't mention her/his name just in case Ruth has her/him as a teacher. Also, later on in the show she impersonated Cher ("I Got You Babe") and Chancellor Ianni.

John Lee did Leo Getz from "Lethal Weapon 2." Too bad he wasn't eligible for the t-shirt.

Matt Spearman, the second eligible contestant, did a cross between George Bush and Ray Babbitt (Dustin Hoffman) in "Rain Man."

Pet peeves! I hate them. Sometimes I feel I have so many that I'm a pet peeveaholic.

Pet peeve number 1: People who chew gum and snap it constantly. Have you ever sat behind a person in class and had to put up with that annoying noise for 50 minutes or more? Every time I encounter such an experience I feel as if I could turn around and rip that person's tongue, teeth and tonsils right out of their mouths.

Pet peeve number 2: People who are late, or worse yet never show up to an appointment or get-together. The thing that gets to me is that sometimes there isn't even an apology, they just say that something else came up and/or that they forgot when they've missed an event.

As for people who are late, they aren't as bad, but I'm usually mad because I'm always early, and having to sit and wait is not my idea of a good time.

The only thing that is worse than this is a reporter showing up late and then telling you his or her story still isn't finished when the deadline was hours ago. That just sort of comes with the job. Or at least it's come with every position I've held on the STATESMAN.

Pet peeve number 3: The way some idiots drive. People who forget to turn on their blinkers, people who leave their blinkers on after turning and people who turn their blinkers on just as they start to turn.

There should be a special class on how and when a blinker should be turned on and off before and after making a turn. If people do it wrong a cop should pull them over and give the person a $50 fine for being stupid.

Of course, if I did it wrong I wouldn't be happy about getting such a huge fine, but it was just an idea.

Pet peeve number 4: Crabby people. I believe that everyone has a right to be crabby, but I'm sure you can all relate to knowing someone who is beyond an ordinary crabbiness. These people are everywhere, and every time you see them (and hear them) they are itching about something. They are the type of people who can never be pleased, and they think that the entire world is there trying to tick them off. Usually they are red heads, but be forewarned—people have been known to dye their hair.

Pet peeve number 5: Rude sales clerks and/or rude customers. Everyone has gone to buy something and/or return something and gotten a rude sales clerk who acts like you are totally bothering them and actually making them do some work. People like this should be reported to the management and fired! You can bet that if these clerks were serving you when management was around it would be a totally different story. The same goes for customers.

Pet peeve number 6: People who do not know the meaning of the word whisper. These are the people that you know are there even though you cannot see them because you can hear them.

These are the pet peeves that bother me the most. There are of course other less irritating pet peeves, like people who chew their ice cream or chomp loudly on ice cubes. But then again when those two pet peeves are in the process of taking place in front of you they do tend to rank higher on the list.

Have a good week everyone, and try to patiently put up with your pet peeves. And if I catch you chewing and snapping your gum within ear shot LOOK OUT!

Dream at the DECC

Christine Harris
Staff Writer

Do you remember the songs "You Can't Hurry Love", "Baby Love," and "Stop In The Name Of Love?" The superstar group The Supremes recorded all those hits. Now you can see how these talented ladies became part of American music history.

Dreamgirls, a Broadway play, is coming to the Duluth Entertainment Convention Center (DECC). Curtain time is 7:30 p.m. on Sun., April 29.

Opening in 1981, Dreamgirls won six Tony Awards and appeared on Broadway for four years. Also, this play has been featured in Paris, Tokyo, and London. Dreamgirls is doing a nation-wide tour and will be playing in places such as Iowa and Michigan.

Dreamgirls is the backstage saga of three back-up singers who are transformed into The Supremes. The Supremes were part of the 1960's birth of the unique style of music: the "Motown" sound.

The show's story has dramatic roots and is filled with vintage rhythm and blues. Michael Bennett, the famous choreographer-director of the original Dreamgirls, said of this production, "The problems that block the characters in Dreamgirls are just problems about life as an American, the problems you have when you're in your 20s and you find out that happily ever after doesn't mean the things you thought...and that you can get everything you want, and it's not what you thought it was going to be."

The show portrays the human toll taken by commercial success of "on-a-roll" careers. Mary Wilson, one of the original Supremes, who saw Dreamgirls for the first time, said she wept because it so accurately depicts the often stormy relationships of the supergroup.

Michael Bennett, the choreographer-director of A Chorus Line was attracted to the show because there would be no wall between the actors and the audience—the energy of the cast could be transmitted directly to the spectators. Michael Bennett died about a year ago of AIDS. But don't worry, the direction is under the capable hands of Daniel Lorenzo and Robert Durkin.

Dreamgirls is one of the few musicals to have its original cast album win a Grammy and go platinum. In addition, it made a star out of soul singer, Jennifer Holliday. Her singing of "And I'm Telling You I'm Not Going" became a single hit, rising to the top of the charts.

The fast paced show is filled with memorable songs. Much of the dialogue is sung. The costumes are so numerous that special techniques were made to move the show along more smoothly.

Tickets are priced from $15 to $29. You may be thinking that is a lot of money; but how many times in your life are you offered a chance to see a Broadway show? Tickets can be ordered and charged by telephone by calling the Duluth/Superior Entertainment League at 722-2000 or the DECC box office at 727-4344.

There is a great demand for tickets, so don't delay on buying your tickets.

HINT: If you don't have the $15 or $29, don't worry. You may still get a chance to see this show. There is a student ticket rush. Tickets will be sold to students for $4 one hour before show time. This only pertains if the show hasn't been sold out. Don't wait too long, though, because I have a feeling that these tickets are hot.

Contest: Joke of the Week

You marry her.

Do you have a joke that you think is good? Then share it with everyone! One joke will be printed each week and everyone is welcome to submit their favorite joke to the STATESMAN office in Kirby 118. If your joke is printed you will win a free personal of 25 words or less. So submit yours today.

and talent goes into using them," said Kropp.

Kropp's show consists of wood sculptures, ceramics, oil paintings and charcoal and pencil drawings. He counts ceramics as his favorite medium because it involves having total freedom over the piece.

"I am doing as much variety as I can with different mediums. I like art that appeals to the masses. You don't have to have an art degree to appreciate art. I think my art is fun."

His long-term goals include working with computer animation, either making commercials or a movie. He thinks he will start in advertising, but with the graphic art business booming, he will be able to go on to other things.

The biggest difference between these two artists is their creation techniques.

Kirby from 6A

Eric Seaberg did an impersonation of Jimmy Tingle. I don't know who Jimmy Tingle is, but maybe you do. He also wasn't eligible for the t-shirt.

Cori Casselius did her impersonation of Bill Murray in the movie of "Caddyshack."

She did an excellent job as the third contestant.

With only three contestants, judging wasn't difficult. Ronchak and Spearman were declared the winners.

Luomala lectures

Katie Jones
Staff Writer

On Thurs., April 19, Nancy Luomala gave a lecture entitled "Feminist Art of the 70s" in the Tweed Museum's second floor lecture gallery.

Luomala herself is an impressive woman. She is a UMD graduate who teaches art history and feminist art at Mankato State University. She also started one of the first classes in feminist art history.

Her presentation consisted mainly of the history of the women's movement in art. Luomala's slide show was a survey of women's art since the late 60s.

"It's good to be at the beginning of a movement because then you can witness the changes in the end," said Luomala.

What brought on this move toward feminist art? Luomala said, "Women in the late 1960s started to stir for their own piece of the American pie." As the world was changing economically, socially, and spiritually, women wanted their fair share of it, too.

Luomala presented works by artists such as Faith Ringold, Judy Chicago, Miriam Shapero, Barbara Roberts, and more. She surveyed what action females had taken to propel their art. This included protesting at the Whitney Museum because they did not show enough women's art.

Another part of the lecture was her introduction of feminist terms used in the art form. One of the most interesting was femmage, which is the feminist approach to a collage made of woman-associated non-traditional materials.

In Luomala's words, the decade of the '70s "...has accelerated reassessment of scholarship, attitudes and institutional hierarchies. Acceptance by...a growing portion of the arts community has resulted in an explosion of new art directions from women artists who had previously been repressed by convention, institutions, and silence."

Luomala summarized what feminist art did and will continue to do for the art world. "Artists are on the fringes of society, but we are its prophets."

Over the lake and across the bridge to UWS we'll go. With UMD currently in the middle of its production of King Lear, UWS will also take to the stage this week with The Boys Next Door.

The show will be premiering April 26 and will run through May 5.

The Boys Next Door is a comedy by Tom Griffen which focuses on the lives of four mentally retarded men living together as outpatients.

The company will hold a benefit for the Association of Retarded Citizens by performing on May 6 in the Manion Theatre.

The play's characters consist of Barry Klemper, a schizophrenic and would-be golf pro; Norman Bulansky, a man emotionally involved with his job at the doughnut shop; Arnold Wiggins, a paranoid depressive fixated on Russia; and Lucien P. Smith, a master of the first three bars of "The Alphabet Song" and proud owner of a Spiderman tie.

The cast features UWS students and community members with a list of veterans that include Donn L. Hanson, Jim Hunter, Bruce Kasden, Brian Matuszak, Cheryl Menzel and Michael Pallansch.

Newcomers to the UWS stage will be Pete Erlandson, Debbie Knapp, Lynette Teppo and William T. Wright.

John D. Munsell will direct the production.

Tickets for the performance have been on sale since April 16, and the cost is $8 for adults and $5 for students. Tickets can be reserved by contacting ARC offices at 392-6668.

Be forewarned that The Boys Next Door contains language which may be found offensive. But then again what play doesn't?

One of Chicago's leading dance bands will perform at UWS this week in an alcohol and drug awareness event. Brass Bullit will be at the Gate's Field House on the UWS campus on April 27 at 9 p.m.

Throughout 1989 the Brass Bullit has been getting rave reviews nation wide. The band combines music and dance with what seems like little effort. And with costume changes, choreography and Trina Green (former Chicago Honeybear Cheerleader) as their lead vocal, this band seems to do no wrong.

In the fall of 1989 the band toured through Japan. The Japanese have concluded that the band is on its way to the top. With its ability to reach out and get all audience members involved, the band has the ability to go far.

Ario Professional Artists has been quoted saying Brass Bullit electrifies its audiences with a dazzling display of vocalization dance and versatile instrumentation, ranging from rock to jazz. Brass Bullit is composed of talented and energetic performers whose repertoire consists of top hits of the day, plus originals from Atlantic Starr, Stevie Wonder, and Michael Jackson."

Unionization from 1A

the Department of Sociology and Anthropology has one TA that grades and works with groups of students. Hired at 25 percent time, this TA works a total of 16 hours per week. Yet, seven of the 12 composition TAs are hired at 37.5 percent time and are required to teach entire composition classes. Tyllia said it takes about 25 hours per week to teach a composition class. TAs are concerned that they are paid only 12.5 percent more yet are expected to do several times the work.

"The movement to unionize began in the fall of 1988 when a number of graduate assistants from the Twin Cities campus began comparing their working conditions to those of their counterparts at other unionized universities," Buff said.

Discovering considerable inequalities between their non-union ranks, and the unionized graduate assistants from such universities as Michigan, Oregon, Florida at Gainesville and Rutgers College, they concluded that the unionized graduate assistants had considerably better conditions than the non-union university graduate assistants.

Health and childcare packages, equitable workload guidelines and input into developing those guidelines existed at other unionized schools, but were virtually non-existent at the University. Graduate assistants at the unionized schools also had contracts which helped eliminate misunderstandings and unforeseen demands.

The group of graduate students at the University then formed GSEA, joined the National Association of Graduate Students and became affiliated with the Minnesota Federation of Teachers (MFT).

Hasselmo from 1A

"Diversity is one of the leading themes of the budget-makers," he said. "We have a comprehensive plan for recruitment and retention of minority students."

"We are prepared to put additional funding on a bridge basis to increase minority (hiring)," he added.

In areas where women and minorities are unrepresented, Hasselmo said, "We can and should give priority to women and minorities if they are approximately equal to white male applicants."

Although Hasselmo said that he does not support a cap on UMD's enrollment, he does support entrance requirements which show that students are prepared for college-level work.

"It's important that the University put pressure on the public school system, especially on students and parents, so students are prepared for a college education," he said.

Toastmasters Club

A new chapter of Toastmasters International has been started at UMD. It meets every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in K355/357. Toastmasters can help you acquire experience in "on the spot" speaking which is helpful in all jobs and prepared talks that inform, inspire, and entertain. It also helps you gain confidence in yourself and your abilities through acquiring new skills in communication.

All faculty, university employees and students are invited to attend the meetings. Toastmasters is a university club that lasts a lifetime.

Spring Tuition Paid?

Students who have not yet paid their Spring Quarter tuition must do so by the end of Spring Quarter, May 25, or they will be eligible for collection action. The University will collect all outstanding tuition accounts. Final Collection action will result in listing accounts in conciliation court or placing accounts with collection agencies.

A hold has already been placed on the record of students who have not paid Spring Quarter tuition. YOU WILL NOT BE PERMITTED TO PARTICIPATE IN EARLY REGISTRATION FOR FALL QUARTER IF YOUR TUITION IS NOT PAID. NO EXCEPTIONS WILL BE MADE.

Tuition payments that are made by personal check require a 10-day waiting period before a hold will be released from the student's record. If you have any questions or concerns, contact Student Accounts Receivable, Window 15 or 16, DADB.

Fall Registration

Registration begins on April 30 for currently and previously enrolled students. You must have your Registration Status Notice, insurance card, and a completed Course Enrollment Request. You may register for one or both summer sessions when you register for fall. No cancel-add is allowed at this time. Open registration for currently enrolled students for Fall Quarter will be May 18-June 8. Cancel-add will be allowed during this time. ALL holds must be cleared before students can register.

Students born after Dec. 31, 1956, are requested to complete the immunization form (located in the back of the Fall Quarter class schedule). Students may register without completing the form now, but must provide the documentation to the Registrar's Office no later than Oct. 20, 1990.

AIDS Discussion

The UMD AIDS Resource Task Force is sponsoring a panel discussion entitled "The Effects of the Risk of AIDS Infection on Front Line Health Care Workers." The panel will include: Clyde Holmes, Duluth Community Health Center; David Mayo, UMD Department of Philosophy; Brad Peterson, UMD second-year medical student; Linda Van Etta, The Duluth Clinic. The panel discussion will be held in Room 130 of the medical school at 4 p.m. on May 2. Each speaker will make five minutes of introductory remarks, and then it will be thrown open for questions from the audience.

Bulldogs home for key NIC series

The race for the Northern Intercollegiate Conference baseball championship is shaping up to be one of the most competitive battles for the league crown in years. The

BASEBALL

UMD Bulldogs find themselves in the thick of the chase for the league title after their doubleheader with Bemidji State at Bulldog Park. UMD upped their league mark to 4-5-1 and their overall record to 15-9-2 with a win and a tie, after dropping three of four contests last weekend at UM-Morris.

Coming into this week's action, three teams stood ahead of UMD in the league standings. Defending champion Winona State and Southwest State were both 5-3, while UM-Morris was 6-4. The Bulldogs will have a chance to gain some more ground this weekend, as they host Northern State in a four game series at Bulldog Park. The 'Dogs will host two games Friday starting at 1:30 p.m., while Saturday's doubleheader begins at noon.

Brian Zadro tossed a three-hitter and struck out nine Bemidji State batters to lead UMD to a 2-0 first game victory Tuesday. The victory was Zadro's second in the past week, and it was also his second straight outstanding start. The senior lefthander is now 3-1 on the season with an earned run average of 2.37, but he attributes much of his success to his teammates.

"This is the best defensive team I've ever played for," Zadro said. "It helps my confidence a lot. The team's been playing good defense, so I just go after the batters and throw strikes."

Zadro and BSU's Tim Chipman hooked up in a pitcher's duel Tuesday afternoon, as UMD also could muster only three hits. After a scoreless first three innings, UMD broke the ice in the fourth as Garret Salonen blasted a two-run home run over the left field fence. Salonen's blast held up, as Zadro continued to shut the Beavers down and preserve a Bulldog win.

In Tuesday's second game, UMD blew a golden opportunity for a doubleheader sweep. UMD jumped out to a 5-0 lead and seemed to be cruising toward a victory. Two of the Bulldog runs came on a two-run home run by Dennis Angellotti. Things took a turn for the worse in the sixth for the Bulldogs, as BSU came up with five runs to tie the game. UMD had several chances earlier to extend their lead, but they were unable to convert and the game went to extra innings.

The game was halted in the eighth inning with the Beavers at bat when heavy rains, along with thunder and lightning, descended upon Bulldog Park. Play could not be resumed and will go in the books as a tie.

The Bulldogs are back on the winning track after a frustrating four game set at UM-Morris. The 'Dogs lost three out of four encounters, but they could have easily swept the four game series. Morris rallied to beat UMD 9-8 in the opening game Friday, but the 'Dogs captured Friday's nightcap 13-2 in six innings. Saturday was perhaps UMD's most frustrating afternoon of

Griffith taken by Bills

Tom Coombe
Sports Editor

At 10 a.m. Monday morning, UMD senior Brent Griffith got the call he was waiting for. Griffith got word from the National Football League's Buffalo Bills that they selected him in the seventh round. Griffith, a 6-6, 305-pound offensive guard wasn't surprised that Buffalo chose him, but the round in which he was selected was a mild surprise.

"Buffalo seemed to show the most interest in me," Griffith remarked. "They've had people up here four or five times. The round kind of surprised me, because I didn't hear anything from them on Sunday."

Griffith has anchored the Bulldogs' offensive line for three seasons. The 1984 graduate of Little Falls Community High School transferred here from the University of Minnesota, where he spent two seasons in the Gopher program headed by Lou Holtz. Many have questioned whether that move was in Griffith's best interest, but he feels that coming to UMD was a very positive one.

Brent Griffith

"Coming to UMD was the best move I've ever made," Griffith said. "It got me a chance to play right away, and I think the playing time and experience helped me a lot. It also helped being part of a winning program here."

Griffith will take part in the Buffalo Bills mini-camp May 15-20. From there, it's on to training camp which will start in mid to late July. Griffith's first goal is to make the squad, and he should have a good shot to do so. The Bills drafted just one other offensive lineman, and they recently lost offensive guard Joe Devlin, who retired.

Griffith is the second Bulldog to be selected in the NFL draft in three years. Dave Viene, another offensive lineman, was selected by Houston in 1988 and is now with New England. Others from Head Coach Jim Malosky's program who have been selected include Ted McKnight (1977), Vern Emerson (1968), and the late Terry Egerdahl (1976).

'Dogs pad conference lead

Jess Myers
Sports Writer

After surviving the Tuesday evening rains and coming away with two more Northern Sun Conference wins, the

SOFTBALL

Bulldog softball team is in sight of another undefeated season in conference play.

Tuesday night, despite two delays due to torrential rain and a cloud of fog, the UMD women swept Bemidji State to improve their NSC record to 6-0 and pad their conference lead. It was the first-ever night softball game played at Junction Avenue Field, which has had lights installed for only three seasons.

In the first game UMD took a 3-0 after two innings, but the rains came in and the umpire postponed the game for close to 30 minutes. After coach Bill Haller and other assistants were able to work most of the standing water off of the infield the game was resumed. The Beavers quickly came storming back, netting two runs in the third to pull within one. After the brief

BSU rally, Kelli Ritzer held off the Beaver offense, and the Bulldogs scored eight unanswered runs to take the first contest 11-2.

Leslie Marquardt got the call in the second game, and UMD opened with a 5-0 lead. Later in the game BSU seemed to figure Marquardt out, and the Beavers came back to tie the score at 5. Sensing that the 45-game win streak was on the line, Haller pulled Marquardt and inserted Ritzer to try and halt the BSU comeback. Ritzer again quieted the Beaver bats while the Bulldog offense came to life, and UMD escaped with a 8-5 win for a soggy but solid sweep of the doubleheader. Ritzer now holds UMD's best mound record with a 6-1 mark.

Last night the Bulldogs met the Minnesota Golden Gophers in a Minneapolis doubleheader, but results were unavailable as this edition of the STATESMAN went to press.

Friday afternoon in Morris, the 46-game win streak is again on the line as the Bulldogs battle the Minnesota-Morris Cougars in a road doubleheader. The matchups with UMM are two of only four conference games remaining on the 1990 Bulldog schedule.

Last weekend the Bulldogs swept Northern State in Aberdeen to give them a 4-0 NSC mark at the time. Saturday and Sunday the Bulldogs were in Fargo for the North Dakota State Invitational. UMD defeated South Dakota, Moorhead State, Mankato State, NDSU, and North Dakota before falling to St. Cloud State 3-2 in the tournament championship.

The weekend's personal highlight had to be the pitching of sophomore Heather Pfingsten. In 1989 Pfingsten was a freshman sensation, going undefeated on the mound until the season's final day. This season, however, Pfingsten had her share of problems on the Florida/Alabama trip, then was in a serious car accident in late March. The Duluth native made her return to the mound last weekend and won two games, including a 15-0, 3 inning shutout of NDSU. Heather has proven that despite early problems, she is back and again a force to behold when she pitches.

Revenge is sweet

Jeff Winter
Sports Writer

By now you probably expect to see a story about the soccer club when you see my name as the author. Well, this week I'm out to prove you wrong by giving the soccer club push a bit of a rest.

The reigning All-Minnesota Rugby Club champions, UMD, had trained long and hard for its match this past weekend against St. Cloud State. One very obvious reason for their intense preparation for this particular game was revenge. In the match between the two schools last year, UMD came up on the short end of a close affair.

The intense training along with the player's deeply routed desire for revenge obviously paid off as UMD trounced St. Cloud by a score of 14-0.

"The team gained a lot of respect from this win because they didn't believe that UMD has the ability to be one of the best teams in the state, even after recently winning the All-Minnesota title," said team player Bruce Hudoba. "They believed that it was a fluke or stroke of luck that we won the title. Now we are on our way to proving them wrong."

Even though it was their first conference game since winning the title, they won quite convincingly in their shutout performance against St. Cloud.

"Just since we won the title, I've noticed quite a bit of improvement in the team and in individuals, especially in Nathanael Dodge's kicking," said Hudoba.

If you like to see a rugby match, you have your chance this weekend as the UMD men take on Mankato and The Banchees. The women face Mankato. The games are not scheduled for any specific time, but they are supposed to start "around 1 p.m." on the club sports field.

ference championship this weekend as they take part in the conference meet this weekend in Aberdeen, S.D.

The Bulldogs are now 17-5 overall following some non-league battles last week. The 'Dogs dropped a pair of road encounters last Wednesday, falling to St. John's 9-0 and St. Cloud State 5-4. They rebounded over the weekend with two victories over Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference teams Macalester College and Concordia College (Moorhead). UMD topped Macalester 9-0 and Concordia 7-2.

"It was a good week for us," UMD Head Coach Don Roach said. "We got to play all four of our matches outside and we also got to play some good competition."

UMD will look for their ninth straight league title this weekend, but it will not come easily. The Bulldogs swept through the NIC without a loss, but Moorhead State was right behind them. Moorhead's only league defeat came at the hands of the Bulldogs April 6, and Roach is wary of the Dragons and their potential to knock his team off.

"I think we are the favorites, but Moorhead will be tough," Roach remarked. "They've played a lot of matches outside, and they will have a home court advantage at number two and six singles, as both of those kids are from Aberdeen."

The NIC meet will be a "flight tournament," meaning all of the number one singles players play each other, the number twos play each other, and so on. There are six singles flights and three doubles flights. The winner of each flight gets five points for his team, while the runner-up gets three points. The third

Tracy A.
Claseman

Wow. My name is on the sports page. Now I can honestly say I've written for every section of this newspaper at some time during my college career.

And to what, you may ask, do we owe this momentous occasion? Well, it seems my sister has decided to play softball at another fine institution of learning just south of here in Eau Claire, Wis.

Being the supportive older sister that I am, I have attended five of her games, one in Superior and four in a weekend tournament in Eau Claire. I figured that ought to give me the sporting experience necessary to at least write a column for these pages.

Actually, one of my earliest ambitions was to be a baseball writer. Well, to be perfectly honest, I wanted to be a professional baseball player, but I sort of had to give up that dream when I couldn't even make my high school softball team.

So the next best thing, I thought, would be to write about all those baseball greats who keep us entertained throughout nine months of the year (if you count spring training and the World Series).

I have been a Twins fan since I can remember, even back in the dry years of Hosken Powell, Willie Norwood and Roger Erickson, and I wanted to interview these immortals. (If you remember these names, congratulations -- you're a die-hard Twins fan, too!)

Well, as most of you probably know from your own experience, what you wanted to do when you were 10 is probably not what you are preparing to do now. Heck, what you are preparing to do now is probably not what you'll actually be doing when you get out of here, anyway.

So here I am, going in to writing in a slightly different form, but finally doing that sports writing I had always wanted to do. It just goes to show that it helps to know the sports editors around here.

I suppose I should say something at least slightly sports related here, instead of just telling you my life's ambitions. So, here goes...thoughts while watching a fast-pitch college softball game.

I sort of figured if you knew the rules of baseball and slow pitch softball that you'd automatically know the rules of fast pitch, but that ain't necessarily so.

For instance, I didn't realize that a runner can steal a base, but isn't allowed to leave the base until the pitcher throws the ball. In other words, no leading off.

And I didn't realize that if they go into extra innings, they automatically start out each inning with a runner on second in the hopes that a run will score, thus ending the game before midnight (I have seen some baseball games where this might have been a wise move).

I was surprised, too, by the number of suicide squeeze bunts. I mean, I saw more suicide bunts in one game than I've seen in baseball in my life. I was later informed by my sister that this is because the bases are so close together, and it's fairly easy to bring a run home this way.

As you can see, I learned quite a bit of the ways of fast-pitch softball. However, perhaps even more important, I learned the ways of sporting event photographers.

GOLF

for seconds. Blame it on a voracious appetite.

The UMD women's golf team is hungry too—for a victory—after finishing second in as many weeks behind Mankato State.

UMD will get one more crack at the Mavericks this weekend at the Minnesota Golf Coaches Association State Meet. The Bulldogs' chances this weekend depend largely on the presence of Sarah Elton. Elton pulled a muscle in her back and is questionable for the upcoming season finale.

The host Mavericks captured the team title in last week's Mankato State Invitational, beating out second place UMD by 11 strokes. The two-day tournament, held last Friday and Saturday, was played at two different sites. Friday's round was played in Mankato at Terrace View Country Club. Saturday's second round took place at Shoreland Country Club in St. Peter, Minn.

Elton returned to winning form, taking the individual honors with a 79-82 performance. After struggling last week, Elton turned it around and captured medalist honors. What impresses Head Coach Karen Stromme the most about Elton is how she handles herself. "It takes a very big person to play poorly and not to let it show," Stromme said of Elton's misfortunes two weeks ago. Elton's leadership role was exemplary this past week as well. She led the two-day tournament from start to finish. Her 161 total was four shots better than teammate Judy Bornholdt, who finished alone in second at 165.

Bornholdt was right there, as she always is, scoring in the 80's both days. "She's consistency at its finest," Stromme said. Bornholdt coupled rounds of 81 and 84 for a strong second. Deanna Brown of Mankato was three back at 168.

A windy second day made hilly par-69 Shoreland C.C. truly testing. With the tees set back and out-of-bounds markers on every hole but one, attentiveness was at a premium. Elton and Bornholdt were the only Bulldogs to break 90. Kim Maki shot 90 for a 181 total. Meg Stoneking, Cathy Smerud and Lisa Sanders all had 185 tournament totals. Stoneking had a 93 Saturday and Smerud and Sanders added a pair of 94's to round out the Bulldog scoring.

Friday's conditions were ideal—sunny and breezy in the mid 70's. The Dogs trailed by seven shots after two trips around the nine hole, par-72 Terrace View C.C. Elton's 79 provided a two-shot cushion over a group of three golfers. Among those tied for second was Bornholdt. Freshman rookie Lisa Sanders played well and finished with an 89. Maki and Smerud came in at 91, while Stoneking shot 92.

Mankato may be looking over their shoulders this coming weekend at the Minnesota Golf Coaches Association State Meet in Redwing, Minn. This will be the last chance for UMD to catch the Mavericks. The Dogs have finished behind Mankato in both the Winona State and Mankato State Invitationals the past two weeks. "Mankato and Duluth are figured to be one and two battling it out," Stromme said.

The two-day ten-team tournament opens with a practice round Friday followed by 36 holes of competition on Saturday and Sunday.

Men second at Gustavus Invite

Dan Burkhardt
Sports Writer

After a sluggish start and a disappointing finish in the Benson Invitational, the UMD

GOLF

men's golf team rebounded impressively with a strong second place finish in the Gustavus Invitational. UMD 17 teams were in attendance tied with the University of Minnesota for second place with a two day total of 599. Another strong performance was put in by Gustavus Adolphus as they took team honors, led once again by tournament medalist Jon Lindquist. Lindquist shot a three under 67 the second day to beat out fellow teammate Mark Meyer for individual honors. Gustavus' second team and the University of North Dakota finished out the top five. In all, 17 teams were in attendance at this tournament, making the Bulldogs' performance that much better. The first round Friday was played at the Mankato Country Club, and Saturday it moved to Le Sueur. Both courses were in excellent condition and the weather was perfect.

Greg Tuttle turned in a fine performance for UMD, finishing seventh overall and leading the Bulldogs with a two day total of 147, shooting scores of 76 and 71. John Michaud was also impressive.

Men host Bulldog Open

Bret L. Stanley
Sports Editor

It's been a long time coming, but the UMD men's track team will finally host a meet at home.

The Third Annual Bulldog Open will get underway at Griggs Field this Sat., April 28, at 2:30 p.m.

The meet is open to any teams that wish to attend and even some independent teams are likely to come.

While the men's team hosts a home meet, the ladies will still be on the road as they head south to St. Paul for the Macalester Invitational.

The women host their first home meet of the outdoor season May 11 and 12 as Griggs Field will be the home of the Northern Sun Conference Meet. The Bulldog men also will host the NIC meet the same day.

The two UMD track teams were at the River Falls Invitational last Tuesday in River Falls, Wis.

The men fell in second five points behind the host team with 123, but the UMD ladies rolled to victory racking up 177 points for their first place finish. UW-Stout dogged in a distant second with 83.

The ladies notched a number of first place finishers including both their 400- and 1600- meter relays. Marcey Haynes was a double winner posting victories in the 200 and 400. Tammy Gravning was the top shot putter and Lisa Youngdahl was best in the 100.

The Bulldog men also had a number of top finishers at the River Falls meet. The pole vault victory went to Bill Finn and Al Halappa went on to win the 110 hurdles with Terry Hollingsworth echoing the win in the 400 hurdles. The 200-meter event was topped by Tom Ruud, and the 1600-meter relay team was also victorious for the Bulldogs.

Both UMD track teams ran in different directions last Saturday with the men taking part in the Carleton Relays at Northfield, Minn., and the ladies at the Hamline Invitational in St. Paul.

The men's 800 relay team had the best finish taking first at the Carleton Relays behind the team of Brian Johnson, Eric Lundstron, Mike Peller and Tom Ruud.

The Bulldog ladies finished fourth overall at the Hamline Invite with 61 points. St. Thomas had the top team score with 123.

Haynes was again a winner in the 400, and the long 10,000 went to UMD's Jena Berryman.

You see, UMD also happened to be playing in this tournament in Eau Claire, and I graciously volunteered to take pictures for the STATESMAN sports pages. Unfortunately, knowing the photo editor around here is not as helpful as knowing the sports editors, and my pictures were passed over in favor of someone who actually knows what he's doing.

However, just because you're probably all wondering what sort of sports photographer I am, we have hog-tied the photo editor and forced him to develop one of my photos so we could present it to you in this column:

Hey! It's not that bad. Besides, I bet Sid Hartman never published a photo.

place finisher gets two points and the player taking fourth place gets one point for his squad.

Chuck Arnold tops the Bulldogs' lineup at number one singles, and the senior will team with Steve Roach at number one doubles. Junior Jared Roy will be at number two singles, while freshman John Lobland is UMD's number three singles participant. Roach, a sophomore, is at number four, while junior Doug Johnson is at number five. The Bulldogs' sixth singles competitor is freshman Andy Hendrickson.

Lobland and Roy form UMD's number two doubles tandem, while Johnson and Burke Edgerton are at number three doubles.

The Bulldogs journeyed to St. Cloud last Wednesday and fell twice to St. John's and St. Cloud State. St. John's dominated UMD en route to a 9-0 shutout, while SCSU shaded the Bulldogs 5-4.

Arnold played a part in two of UMD's wins. He topped Mark Heimstad at number one singles 6-2, 6-1, and he teamed with Roach to beat Kevin Johnson and Kirk Lithun 6-3, 6-1. Roach won at number four singles, beating Lithun 6-3, 6-1. The other UMD victory was by Johnson, who beat Sean Potter 6-4, 7-6.

UMD's victory over Macalester was a dominant performance on the part of the Bulldogs. All six singles competitors and all three doubles teams were victorious in two straight sets.

Arnold ran his record at number one singles to 7-2 with a 6-1, 6-0 triumph over Ken Johnson. The rest of Arnold's teammates followed suit, as Roy, Lobland, Roach, Hendrickson and Richard Vilones all scored two-set wins.

It was more of the same at doubles as UMD's pairings of Arnold and Roach, Roy and Lobland, and Johnson and Edgerton dominated their matches.

After the conference meet, UMD will play host to the NAIA District 13 meet. That meet will feature all of the NIC schools with the exception of Northern State, who is in another district.

Rec Sports

Who will win it all?

Jeff Winter
Staff Writer

This spring's intramural soccer league has many close races in both the men's and co-rec divisions. In all four of the brackets the first and second place teams are separated by only one victory. As a participant I know that the competition can be extremely intense at times. Also, the skill and determination levels vary quite a bit among the teams. The men's divisions are as close as some of the team names are crude.

Men's AA

Party 'Til She's Cute	3-0
Bay Club	2-0-1
Naturally Brewed	2-2
Beer Splatts	1-2-1
Elbow Deep	0-4

The team I play for, Party 'Til She's Cute, is undefeated and has not allowed any goals against.

"We have a strong core of skilled players that have played together before and know what the other players on the team will do on the field much of the time," said Party 'Til She's Cute captain Bruce Eliason.

In second place is Bay Club, only one point behind in the standings.

"It isn't having a bunch of tremendously skilled players that makes the team so strong, but instead the team's hard work and hustle," said Bay Club captain Will Rightemer. "Our team works really well as a unit."

Key players for Bay Club include forward Dave Hannasch, defender Greg Dorwart and goalie Rich Schultz.

When Bay Club takes the field against Party 'Til She's Cute it will be a tough battle that may determine the spring IM champions.

"We are a well integrated team that knows how to bury the ball deep in the back of the net," said Rad Nads' captain Lance Debar.

Co-Rec A-1

Rad Nads	3-0
Pink Doughnuts	2-1
Screaming Alcoholics	2-1
Flintstone's Chewables	1-2
Chianti	0-4

As captain of Rad Nads Co-Rec team also, Lance Debar's somewhat cocky attitude showed through again in his comments.

"Our women would put the U.S. Women's Olympic Team to shame. They are the backbone of our team," said Debar. "We are a definite soccer powerhouse."

Co-Rec A-2

Spur of the Moment	2-0-1
Toasted on turf	1-0-1
Suckin' Wind	1-1

Spur of the Moment's captain was unavailable for comment and when I asked Toasted on Turf player Kelly Williams about the competition, her only comment was, "Oh, I thought we were the Pink Doughnuts."

As the season draws to a close, I expect the competition to stay close right down to the final whistle.

Men's A-2:

Well, that's the last of each team. Any further questions regarding play-offs should be directed to the Rec Sports office. All the team captains whose team is eligible for play-offs should keep an open eye for any further information concerning a captain's meeting. As of April 24, 1990, there should only be a few teams left that still need to play their last game. Play them hard. Play them well. We'll see ya in the play offs.

P.S. I would like to personally apologize to the Rec Sports department on my last article. It was not meant to be a rip on the department. I was only trying to do write-ups on both the positive AND negative aspects of intramural floor hockey. I'm sorry for any misunderstandings that were created in the process. T.C.

Whatever I Want

Jay W.
Faherty

Spring is definitely the season for intramural sports. Especially if you could have this weather every year. Not even Mick McComber could have ordered a better forecast for the first day of softball, and all other sports can enjoy the warmth, too.

A round of applause should go out to the fine job that was done on the fields in preparation for flag football, soccer and softball. Along with students' cooperation in staying off of the fields, they are now in as good as shape as they have been in.

One field that needs help is the field at Griggs Beach. Thanks to some torrid snow football, the field is almost bare and all that remains are some scattered spots of grass and lots and lots of dirt.

But that dirt isn't the only thing laying around down on the Beach this spring. No, just like past years, the Beach is the spot to lay out and get that much-needed tan and show off that all too little, way too expensive bikini.

Students on the beach can be found doing numerous activities, ranging from tossing around a football or softball, kicking around a soccer ball, or throwing a frisbee across the Beach to just relaxing, studying, and checking out the landscape.

Okay, so the latter few don't occur all that often if you're a guy. After all, "guys just have to be doing something athletic all of the time, they just can't lay out," according to freshman Stef Thalberg. "They have to play softball, basketball, or something." Sorry Stef, that's not necessarily the case. I have seen at least three different guys laying outside of Goldfine Hall doing absolutely nothing (two of them are pictured below).

So just what is it that girls do when they are out on the beach? Well, from what I have been able to gather, they just lay there gathering up all of the sun's rays that they can. Never mind that there are guys out being athletic while they are tanning, these girls want to be there.

Now let's suppose for a minute (and no more) that guys weren't allowed to do their athletic things out on the Beach--that it was a tanning beach only. What would happen to the number of people there? My best estimate is that it would be cut down to a select few that really didn't care about anything but the sun. So what am I insinuating here? I think that the girls are out there to look good and the guys are there to see how good they look and vice versa. Sure, a tan is fine to show off in the halls, but the real showing grounds are those where the tan is attained.

Am I wrong? Well, maybe I have this warped idea of what is happening around campus, but I think that I am pretty close to the right idea on this one. I guess if I have to, I'll just do some more investigating on the subject(s) and let you know the results at a later date and time. Right now I'm off to do research...

The regular season of floor hockey is quickly coming to an end. Soon play offs will be underway, and each league will be competing for the championship title.

For those teams who are wondering how play offs work, here's a quick run-down on rules, regulations and any other additional information pertaining to play offs.

Tuesday, April 24 is the last day of the regular season of intramural floor hockey. There will then be a week off with no play where there could possibly be a captain's meeting concerning schedules for competition and referee meetings entailing any past problems that can be avoided in play offs. After that week, tournaments will commence.

The way play offs work is that any team that has any forfeits will be out of the tournament. Men's A and AA divisions will be combined to compete against one another according to the level of division (A or AA) and each team's winning record. For example, a men's team (division A) with a record of 5-0 could be playing another men's team (division AA) with a record of 2-3. Even though the "A" team has an undefeated record and team "AA" has a record of 2-3, both teams are equal because of the fact that AA is more competitive of the two divisions.

"So far, we haven't had any really big problems with the floor hockey program, except for the (complaints about the) referees," says Rec Sports supervisor Marc Laskow. "It's just that floor hockey is one of the toughest sports to ref. The season is just too short to style the refs (on the ways of making calls). The only thing that we can do now is to have a meeting with all the referees before play offs and talk to them about the complaints so it won't happen during the tournaments."

So, until play offs actually start, here's an update on the teams and how they're doing:

Men's AA-1:

With the recent unseasonably but welcomed warm weather, thoughts of playing volleyball on the beach enter people's minds. However, some players are stuck playing indoors in the intramural volleyball leagues here at UMD.

Action has been going on for a few weeks now and will continue for two more before the playoffs begin.

Here's a look at how the divisions are faring thus far, along with a few comments from possible championship teams:

Co-Rec AA-1

Floorburns	1-2-1
Burnt edges	1-2-1

"We have a lot of experienced players, from freshman to senior level," said IDK captain Gayle Danniger. "We've been in the final four for last two years, also."

Co-Rec AA-2

Satisfaction Grntd.	2-0
Educators	2-1
Nicks-n-Chicks	2-1
Flagrant Disregard	1-2

Strokes of Genius	2-2
Just Do Me	1-2
Lubricated Shiek	1-2
Y?	1-3
Buttkickers II	1-3

Some teams are apparently in the wrong divisions, also. Teams should participate where they belong, or else be ready to tolerate weaker and/or stronger teams than themselves.

"There really isn't that much competition in our league (Co-Rec A-1, not AA)," said Jack Benedix, Beat Phenomenon captain. "We're hoping to stay undefeated and meet some real competition in the playoffs."

Co-Rec A-2

Team Cow	3-0-1
Trojans	3-0-1
Bad Medicine	2-2
Diggers II	2-2
Superposition	2-2
Fubar	1-3
8 Quad	1-3
"I like it!"	1-3

Team Cow has been together for three quarters of co-rec volleyball now and know how each other plays.

"We always win the first couple in the playoffs, but then lose," said Cow captain John Rivers. "Hopefully that can change."

The Trojans have a good team output that accounts for their success and are looking to get better after having been together for two quarters now.

"There are some really tough AA teams, but we can stick with them," said Todd Roeschlein, Trojans captain.

Co-Rec A-3

Donuts and Longjohns	4-0
I Haven't a Clue	4-0
Early parole	3-1
Fuzzy Navels	2-2
Clean Sweep	1-3
Flower Power	1-3

The Clippers	0-4

Skilled individuals and teamwork have led to I Haven't a Clue's success thus far.

"We're looking to do well in the playoffs," said captain Meggan Pope. "But you never know how you'll do against some of the AA teams."

Women's

Last Chance	3-0
T-N-T	2-0
Dirty Diggers	2-1
Youth Gone Wild	1-1
Chicks w/Hits	1-2
Pleasure Crew	0-2
Tip it up, slam it down	0-3

Last Chance has been successful, thanks in part to a couple of years' experience. Now that they are juniors, they're looking to compete.

"I think that we will contend with other teams come playoff time," said Carol Sanders, captain.

Competition in division A is not as fierce as that in AA, resulting in some very good records.

"I want to stay away from predicting the playoffs," said Crash-n-Burn captain Ben Metcalf. "I know we can hold our ground in A, but I don't know about AA."

Look for more volleyball news come playoffs. For now just enjoy the thoughts of playing on the beaches this summer because they're still playing indoors at UMD.

Intramural softball gets lots of sun for openers

Heather Weyker
Staff Writer

"It's just another manic Monday..."

After a light rain Monday morning the sun came out, partially dried up the fields and softball was ready to be played.

The first two teams observed were Women's AA teams Your Fantasy with DaNeil Stish as captain and Slammin' Scams with Michelle Westman as their captain.

For Your Fantasy the game started out great! By the end of the third inning they were ahead 9-0.

For a third-year team they have their act together. They played with speed and accuracy. They were ready for whatever came to them. Stish plays a great short stop. She picks up grounders and snaps them to first base. Other players that were noticeable were Jackie Kangas, Mary Ross and Liz Peak.

Peak had three RBIs with a hit in the second inning.

"It's nicer to have a wider variety of teams," said Ross.

"Last year there were only four teams compared to 16 this year."

"We play well when it counts, so watch out for us in play-offs," said Slammin' Scams member Lisa Bishop.

The quality I admired most by both teams was their attitudes. They were supportive of their team members, had fun and didn't let things like the final score (19-1 in favor of Your Fantasy) bring them down.

Next observed were Women's A teams El Bats with Joel Knight as captain and Dangerous Dames with Brenda Bergquist as captain.

When asked what their goal was for the season, the Dames replied, "We're going for the shirts" (the championship shirts).

I then spoke with El Bats, who have won the last two championships.

"We're hoping we repeat the past phenomenal seasons," said Knight.

The final score was 4-3 in

"With adverse weather conditions our team will get to be a championship team with such hitters as John BoChamp, LeRoy Lillquist and of course their Hot Bat Girls," said teammate Troy Brecken.

Trump the Team played very well--strong, efficient and alert.

"We do what we have to to win," said Barrett Sullivan of Trump.

"I feel really confident about the season and hope that we will do well," said Nodland.

The final two teams observed were also Men's A, with the Landsloths with Captain Matt Hibbison playing the No Names with Captain Pete Koeneman.

The game didn't start out in the Landsloths' favor, but it ended up that way, with a final score of 11-7.

At the beginning of the game the Sloths were behind. No Names had good ground hitters and knew where to aim the ball. At this time Lions said, "It's never over til it's over," very appropriately because the Landsloths got it together and came back.

"We strive for perfection, and we settle for nothing but the best," said Hibbison.

Players have to remember to bring their activity card and I.D. in order to play, and if you forget, then don't get angry with the umpires; they're just doing their jobs.

More softball will be played with games continuing for the next three weeks. Then the playoffs will start bringing all umpires to say...

favor of Dangerous Dames.

I then moved to a Men's A game, with third-year team 21 Pump Street's captain Chip Brecken and the rest of the pumpers playing first-year team Trump the Team with captain Jeff Nodland.

At the bottom of the fifth inning the score was 6-4 in favor of Trump the Team. Both teams had fun and took it light-heartedly.

Once again the attitudes of the teams were great.

"Even though we start out struggling, watch out for us in the play offs," said Keith Loquist of 21 Pump Street.

the year, as the Cougars rallied in both games in the late innings to take 3-2 and 4-3 wins.

"We didn't have a lot of enthusiasm or intensity at Morris," UMD Head Coach Scott Hanna said. "Maybe we were a little worn out from so many road games. It's nice to get back home and play a few games here."

The 'Dogs jumped out to a 5-0 lead in Friday's first game. Mike Petrich had a two-run home run in the first and Cully Olson had a two-run blast in the third to help UMD. In the fourth, however, the roof caved in. Morris sent 14 batters to the plate and scored nine runs. UMD mounted a rally, but the Cougars held on and set the tone for the series.

Petrich had three hits and four runs batted in for UMD, while Olson added two hits and three RBI. Jason Peterson suffered the loss for the 'Dogs, in relief of starter Mark Wilson.

Zadro fired a three-hitter in Friday's nightcap, which UMD won in six innings because of the ten-run rule. He struck out nine batters and didn't allow a run after Morris got two in the first.

The Bulldogs played long ball in this contest. Jeff Kaldor, Barry Fermanich and Angellotti all had home runs as UMD pounded the Cougar pitching for 15 hits. Kaldor drove in three runs, while Lonny Hickey had three hits. Brett Davis and Troy Brekken also added two hits. UMD scored in every inning as they rolled to an easy win.

Kaldor had a run-scoring double and Angellotti a run-scoring single in the first and second innings, respectively, as UMD got off to a 2-0 lead in Saturday's curtain raiser. The Cougars got a run in the fourth, and one in the sixth to tie it. They won it in the bottom of the seventh as the winning run scored on an error.

The Bulldogs, like in every other game in the series, jumped out to an early lead in the fourth and final game of the set. They scored three times in the first, with two coming in on an Olson single. After that, the UMD bats were silenced, as they could not push another run across.

Morris rallied for one in the fifth, when Hanna called on Lee Stephenson to relieve starter Mike Lenarz. Everything that could go wrong for UMD did in the bottom of the sixth. The Cougars got a bad hop single, and took advantage of an error, a hit batsman and an errant throw to the plate to pull out the 4-3 win and capture their third one-run win of the series.

"It seemed like we always had a breakdown in one of three areas in each of the three games we lost," Hanna said. "When our pitching was good, the hitters didn't come through, or when we hit we couldn't get anybody out, and when both the pitching and hitting was solid, our defense was bad."

UMD will look to close out their conference season with some momentum heading into the NAIA District 13 playoffs. UMD has eight of their final 10 league games at home, and they are looking to finish strong and garner a good seed for the playoffs.

Student assistant coach Mark Folska, in his fifth year with the squad and one of the true veterans of the Bulldogs' baseball program, feels that UMD still has the capability to win the league crown.

"I really think our chances are good," Folska remarked. "I don't think we'll be swept like at Morris anymore. I don't think the competition we'll be facing is superior to Morris and Winona. In fact, now that we've gotten that behind us, we've gotten it out of our system, even though we know that we'll have to win almost all of the conference games left to win the NIC title."

as he finished a close second to Tuttle with a 148. He was followed by Paul Shromoff with a score of 151. Jay Hames, who was playing in his first tournament of the spring, finished with a 153. Dave Eilertson had a score of 160. All five UMD golfers improved drastically from their last meet. The experience and improving play may be signs of good things to come.

"It was our best finish in over three years," UMD Head Coach Butch Kuronen said. "We played very well."

"We've just got to keep it going," Tuttle remarked. They'll have a chance to do just that when they travel to Iowa this weekend for the Drake Relays and the Iowa State Invitational. The Drake Relays run today and tomorrow, while the Iowa State tournament gets underway Saturday in Ames, Iowa. The Bulldogs left yesterday and played a practice round at Edinburgh Country Club in the Twin Cities, and from there they moved on to Des Moines, Iowa. Tough competition awaits the Bulldogs in Iowa as many NCAA Division I schools will be playing including the defending champion Iowa Hawkeyes. UMD's endurance will be tested immediately Thursday as they play 36 holes to start the tournament.

Will you be covered from graduation day to pay day?

If you are over 19 and no longer a full-time student, you could be on your own when it comes to health coverage. And that could be risky without a comprehensive, temporary plan to protect you from the time you graduate until you're eligible for group coverage with your first job.

That's why we designed INSTA-CARE.

This unique Blue Cross and Blue Shield plan provides up to $1 million of major medical coverage for 60, 90 or 120 days. And best of all, INSTA-CARE is affordable... as little as $22.24 per month* and coverage can begin within 24 hours in most cases.

It's a good way to cover the gap between graduation day and pay day. And INSTA-CARE is backed by the company you can trust for strength and stability... Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Minnesota.

Find out more about INSTA-CARE and other individual plans. AWARE CARE and AWARE Gold, by contacting your local Blue Cross and Blue Shield agent. Or call us at (612) 456-5050 or 1 800 382-2000, Ext. 5050, or mail the coupon below.

*60-day coverage. $500 deductible plan for a male under age 30. Alcohol and chemical dependency coverage not included.

Yes, I'm interested in more information about:

INSTA-CARE - Low-cost temporary coverage.

AWARE CARE - Up to $1 million worth of long-term major medical coverage; your choice of seven deductibles from $150 to $2000.

AWARE Gold Individual - Long-term comprehensive coverage including preventive care from over 7,000 physicians and specialists statewide.

This University Works Because We Do.

National Officeworkers' Week
April 23-27, 1990

And we deserve a voice.

Civil service employees keep this university running — and we deserve a voice in the decisions that affect our everyday work lives. With the strong voice that a union can bring us, we can work on issues that we care about: a fair and even-handed grievance procedure, a promotional system that encourages the growth of employees, and a flexible and equitable working environment throughout the U. We can create a pay structure that recognizes and rewards the years of effort and expertise that civil service employees put into this university. We can build a university which values the contributions of civil service, and treats us with dignity and respect.

We are proud to be organizing with a union that has been at the forefront on issues that we care about. For decades, AFSCME has been fighting for promotions, better wages and working conditions and child care for 1.2 million public and university employees across the nation. In Minnesota, 40,000 state, county and local government employees represented by AFSCME have a strong voice at the Legislature, at the bargaining table and in the work place. We look forward to the day when clericals, technicals and professionals can join them, and together make the U a better place for employees — the people who make this university work.
